Last summer, the second author carried out field studies around Taşköprü village of Kulp (Diyarbakır Prov.), situated in the mountainous region. During night collecting using a light trap with a lamp of Mercury Vapour 160W, two specimens of recently described species, Echthromyrmex sehitlerolmez Koçak & Kemal were captured. Although the specimens were fresh, ants destroyed their abdomens partly in the next day. Comparing the wing markings of the Kulp specimens with the Holotype from Hakkari, some minor differences were noticed. However, it seems not so significant for the time being.

For determining the distribution of the species precisely in South East Turkey, more materials from new localities are needed.

Cesa News was established by the Cesa, on 8 January, 2008. Information about the activities of the Cesa, i.e., announcements, general news, expeditions, publications, visitors, workshops, seminars, faunal lists, and similar activities are published in the Cesa News, with rich original illustrations.

Cesa News has internet issues only, in pdf format, and freely accessible. Currently, all the issues are located in the Internet Archive. Cesa News is continuously recorded by the Zoological Record, and listed in the Scientific Master Journal List of the Thomson Reuters. No new nomenclatural act was published in the Cesa News so far. However, it is recommended to the readers interested in the World Entomology, as it gives an opportunity following the scientific activities, and also other publications of the Cesa. The field programs of the Cesa Projects on the Insects of Turkey (ETR) and the Old World (EOW) will begin in the coming spring of 2009. Therefore, the excursions notes on the insects, and as results of these, faunistic evaluations will be more frequently seen in the coming issues of the Cesa News.

After completing the first year, totally 50 scientific articles were published in 38 issues, together with many announcements on various subjects. Totally, 587 copyrighted original images in good condition, and 9 distributional maps were published. Contents of the Cesa News in the year of 2008, with full bibliographical information are given in Miscellaneous Papers Nr.146.
